Keeping the heart fit

Heart Comeback

Prescription exercise makes recovery smoother

The last thing Lloyd Wyatt, 70, wanted to do after his heart attack a couple of months ago was exercise.

But exercise he does, under the supervision of the the San Antonio Community Hospital Cardiac Rehabilitation Program — and he is learning to like it.

"It's helping," he said during his second week of training. "I feel good. I really feel good. I can tell from week to week."

Wyatt, a retired electrician from Montclair, said he will probably continue in the non-monitored program after he finishes his 12-week stint in the present program. He also plans to take regular walks.

"This is my first (heart attack) and hopefully my last," he said.

His chances of it being his last are greatly increased by his participation in the program, according to Nursing Supervisor Rosemarie

Research has shown that physical conditioning and changing harmful lifestyle habits are important steps toward recovery and rehabilitation following an attack or heart surgery, according to the program's introductory pamphlet.

"When they leave the program they are very informed about what their risk factors are and how to handle them, which decreases their chance of having another attack," Bunch said. She named obesity, diabetes, hypertension, stress and smoking as some common risk factors.

To encourage good habits, the cardiac rehabilitation nurses visit patients after attacks or surgery and show them educational film strips, Bunch said. Many of those patients wind up in the program, she said, but they must have the consent of their physicians.

"Very few do not come to a program like this anymore," she said, adding that it is covered by Medicare and most health insurance plans. If insurance covers 50 percent of the cost, Bunch said, that is all the hospital collects. There is no charge to the patient.

The program, which has been operating at SACH since 1978, makes use of five pieces of exercise equipment, as well as steps and weights. Up to four patients can go through their routines at a time while hooked up to a monitoring system.

Each patient has an individual program designed for him, based on an initial maximum stress test, which determines what physical shape the patient is in.

The patient follows the "exercise prescription" three times a week, while wearing a battery-operated monitor on his chest which transmits signals to a terminal at the nurse's desk.

The patients perform warm-up exercises and have their blood pressure taken before, after and even during their routine, if necessary.

Each patient eventually uses all the equipment, which also includes exercise bicycles, a treadmill, a rowing machine and an arm ergometer, which makes the arms pedal like legs do on a bicycle.

After the session the patient cools down by walking around the room and relaxing with a glass of orange juice, if they like. The patient's heart rate must be normal before he can leave.

"If the patient is having any abnormal heart rate increase we will stop them and notify their physician," Bunch said. In the seven years of operation there have been no cardiac arrests, Bunch said. However, emergency equipment is in the room and the nurses are trained for emergency treatment, just in case.

There are presently 30 patients in the program, but there have been as many as 60 enrolled at a time, she said. Currently crammed into a regular ward-size room, the center is scheduled to move to a larger facility early next year.

The equipment will double and services will be expanded to include unmonitored exercise for former patients and people with high risk factors who may not have had heart attacks or surgery yet. The participants will still be under the nurses' supervision.

"Group exercise always helps you stay motivated," Bunch said. "And it's in the hospital, so we feel that the safety factor is ... increased."

The unmonitored program will cost patients $3 a visit because it is not covered by insurance. Patients may stay in the program as long as they want.

And even though Wyatt says he doesn't "really go for it," he plans to keep up with the exercise by entering the unmonitored program. After all what's a little exercise if it adds a few more years to your life?

Cucamonga Junior High School Principal Dave Soden stands in front of an "expectancies" chart developed as part of the new "effective schools" program.

Cucamonga Junior High happy with new program

By Patrick McGreevy

A new school flag and brochure are among the tangible results of an "effective schools" program being implemented for the first time this year at Cucamonga Junior High School.

The board of trustees for the Central School District greeted a presentation on the new program with enthusiasm Nov.

About ten teachers from the school and the school's administration were on hand to show off the school's accomplishments, which include a new school flag and brochure. The goal-setting program from the State Department of Education is being pioneered in the West Valley this year by the Central School District.

"We're creating an environment with this program that really stresses education. And not just coming to school, but in being successful," said Dave Soden, principal at the junior high school.

The program was implemented in an effort to follow the state's lead in efforts to improve CAP (California Assessment Program) test scores, which in turn would mean improved quality of education.

Central's superintendent, Frank Cosca, attended a conference sponsored last vear See SCHOOL/Page 7

Parking card renewal due

Local police are reminding the public that the disabled persons blue parking placards expired Oct. 1 and should be replaced to avoid a citation.

The new placards issued by the Department of Motor Vehicles are white, heatresistant plastic, with a red border bearing a series of numbers beginning with J000001.

Ontario police Lt. Don Manning said, "I think a lot of people don't know these things (the placards) have changed."

Fontana police Lt. Sam Scott said, "We're finding a lot of people still have the blue placard."

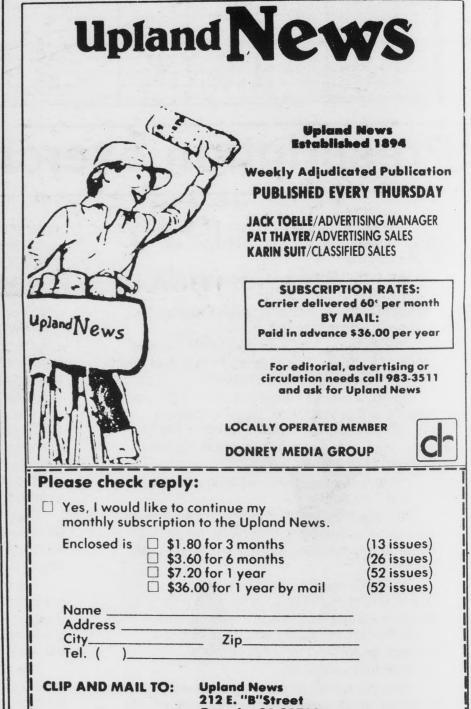

Some police agencies have allowed a grace period and have been issuing warnings instead of citations to violators.

Fontana police will cite violators after Dec. 1.

Those seeking the new placards must fill out a new application. The eligibilty requirements have not changed, except a doctor's certification is required. The DMV also will issue identification cards with the parking placards.

A temporary placard for disabilities of less than than one year is available.

The change in parking placards went into effect July 1 and is designed to curtail some of the abuse existing in the current system, according to DMV officials.

Nursing students watch handling of a disaster

By Marianne Aiken

Twenty-six advanced nursing students at Chaffey College got some insight into how disasters are handled when they participated in a toxic gas leak simulation Oct. 29 in Pomona.

The resources of local hospitals, police and fire departments and hazardous material handling units were tested, in addition to the students' diagnostic and acting abilities.

When the driver of a school bus supposedly had a heart attack and crashed into a tanker truck on Harrison Street across from Pomona's Harrison Elementary School, there were a few moments of suspense as the injured students inside the bus waited for a neighbor to call police.

That's the way it really happens in a disaster, said Leslie McLeod, public relations representative at Pomona Valley Community Hospital (PVCH).

A police unit was the first to get there, followed by an ambulance and fire vehicles. Meanwhile, the students in the bus all had different injuries to act out, mostly a combination of fractures and abrasions and a few blunt chest traumas. Medical personnel also had to treat the cardiac arrest that caused the accident.

Smoke bombs going off at the site represented toxic fumes that would be leaking from the tanker if there was a real accident.

"The response team had to deal with a bus full of injured kids, and toxic fumes escaping into the neighborhood," said McLeod.

Nursing students from Mt. San Antonio College in Pomona also played victims, as did volunteers from PVCH. The college students had the task of playing 12-13-year-olds.

"The response people had to actually calm them down and treat them on the scene," said McLeod.

"It was fun to watch the kids and see how they got into it," she said. "One of the kids was designated as a paranoid who didn't want anyone to touch him."

Louise Agos, an instructor in Chaffey College's associate degree nursing program, said the simulation gave students an opportunity to learn what the appropriate behavior would be for the injuries they were acting out.

"It gave them a chance to bone up on how the patient would act," Agos said. "There was a lot of learning going on, but it was fun. One girl wandered away from the group, which was appropriate for her condition."

Part of PVCH's accreditation includes a couple of disaster simulations every year, said McLeod.

The simulation's objectives were to test pre-hospital communications and county coordination of the disposition of patients, prepare emergency response teams and test their skills and knowledge of procedure, and test the internal hospital disaster plan.

Some volunteers were assigned to represent the media and hospital public relations people had to respond to questions and give out information about the disaster.

Students raise cash for quake

By Marianne Aiken

Proving that it takes an earthquake to get some kids to stay after school, several Alta Loma High School sophomores and seniors will be putting in some overtime until Thanksgiving to raise funds to rebuild Mexico city after the Sept. 19 Mexican earthquake.

"We're shaking back," is the theme of the fundraising drive students started, with the goal of raising $10,000 by Nov. 27.

Sophomores Chris Hillman, Tony Zamora, John Pulver, Bess Baer, and senior Dianne Moore stayed after school last Wednesday to help paint banners and decorate collection cannisters to be distrubuted around the community.

So far the response has been good after one week of active fund raising.

"Most of the stores I've talked to have agreed to have a collection box or can," sophomore Bess Baer said.

The project started when a group of students came to Alta Loma High School student services coordinator Gil Ortiz in the beginning of October and wanted his help in coordinating a relief project.

Along with the money collected will be a letter stating the students' ideas of what the money should be used for.

"Rebuilding hospitals is the primary idea," said Ortiz.

He said the funds are especially needed now that the earthquake is no longer in the headlines every day.

"Now it's not in the minds of the people because it's not in the media," said Ortiz. "This could happen to us, since we live in a major fault area."

The students started having weekly meetings in the middle of October to plan the relief project.

Fifteen-year-old Hillman said he got involved because a couple of his friends were coming to the meetings.

"I decided it would be a more intersting thing to do after school than sports," Hillman said.

In addition to Baer, Hillman, Zamora, Moore and Pulver, sophomores Kimber McNabb and Gabby Romero, and seniors Rickard Salsgard, Lara Petrocelli, Joey Buccheri, and Nancy Silberberg are other prime movers. Salsgard is a 17-year-old foreign exchange student from Sweden.

Initially, members of the committee went to each teacher and asked if they could send someone to come in and talk to their classes for 2-3 minutes. Twenty members of the Alta Loma High School Associated Student Body joined them in going out individually to talk to classes Friday, Nov. 1.

They are also collecting money during lunches and will go to businesses in Rancho Cucamonga and Alta Loma.

The funds raised will be a Christmas gift to the American Red Cross for distribution to Mexican Red Cross.

People who want to donate money to the cause should make checks payable to the American Red Cross, and mail them to Alta Loma High School, 8880 Base Line Rd., Alta Loma, Calif. 91701, to the attention of "Mexican Earthquake Relief Fund." Money can also be dropped off at the student store between 11:45 a.m. and 1:15 p.m.

SIDS MONITOR DONATED — Three-month-old Justin Grey of Rancho Cucamonga received a sudden infant death syndrome health monitor from the Rancho Cucamonga Elks Lodge No. 2570 Oct. 22. The device picks up on the child's breathing and heart rate. The monitor, which would have cost Justin's mother $320 a month, will be donated to another child when Justin no longer needs it. The Elks raised the money to purchase the monitor by raffling a trip to Hawaii during a luau Sept. 28. Justin is pictured with his mother, Karen Grey, and Elks Club Leading Knight, John Chioini.

by the San Diego County school district, the first district in the state to implement the "effective schools" program.

All of the district's principals subsequently went to San Diego for training in the program's implementation.

"It's nice to be able to take a leadership role on this," Cosca said. "Most of the other districts are where we were a year ago, doing the survey." Soden's school and others in the district took a survey of teachers, parents, students, administrators and classified employees in September 1984.

As a result of the survey, Soden determined that the four areas in most need of improvement at his school are "safe and orderly environment," "clear school mission," "high expectations," and "home-school relations."

Development of the program began last year. The tangible results were on display before the school board Wednesday.

The school has a new brochure that explains its goals and expectations. A wallsized chart has been made showing the expectations for each grade. A yellow school flag with the words, "we believe in the future" has been made.

"There's a message there, that we believe in our students and we have high expectations for them," Soden said.

Soden said the parents attending back-to-school night received the strip of the wall chart that applies to their son or daughter's grade.

The accompanying written statement of purpose further clarifies and puts on paper the school's position.

"This is mainly our reason for being here," he said. "All our decisions are based on these goals. Now everyone knows them."

Historic home tour will benefit hospital auxiliary

"Over The River and Thru The Woods" will be the theme of the Thanksgiving Home Tour sponsored by the San Antonio Community Hospital Auxiliary.

Four area homes chosen for their historical significance, handsome remodeling and interesting artifacts, will be open for public inspection from noon to 8 p.m. Nov. 25. p.m. Tickets will be $10 per person if purchased prior to the event. Tickets bought the day of the tour will be $11. The proceeds are to benefit the hospital's auxiliary projects.

The homes to be toured are the home of Corrie Stoap on Euclid Avenue; the home of Dr. and Mrs. Lorin Spencer in Upland; the residence of Dr. and Mrs. Gerald Rawle in San Antonio Heights; and the twostory Mediterranean-style home of Dr. and Mrs. David Van Every in Claremont.

Tickets may be obtained by mailing checks to the San Antonio Community Hospital in care of the public relations department, 999 San Bernardino Rd., Upland 91786 or to the Bookworm, 229 N. Second Ave., Upland 91786. Call 985-2811, extension 2162, for additional information.

Outrage' prompts forming of committee

By Kimberly Heinrichs

Residents formed a mayor's advisory committee in response to their "outrage" after the Upland City Council changed its vote on a controversial church/ school project last week.

Four residents were named to the committee last week by Mayor Richard Anderson to advise the city planning staff of traffic and safety problems on 19th Street between Campus and Euclid avenues.

Despite 180 signatures on a petition against the complex proposed for 19th Street, the Planning Commission approved the project in September.

Three residents spoke and many others were present at the council meeting, when the council approved the group's appeal of the commission's decision. After that vote, Anderson called for a short break to allow those attending the meeting for that issue to

After the break, Councilman

Frank Carpenter — who had voted for the appeal - asked for a reopening of the vote because he had not been satisfied that the issue was resolved. His suggestion was accepted with a 3-2 vote.

The council eventually unanimously decided to change its earlier vote and put off making a decision on the Life Bible Fellowship complex until its first meeting in March.

The fellowship, which hopes to locate a church and grade school on the 10 acres, is expected to close escrow for the property in April.

In the meantime, staff and the commission will study the surrounding undeveloped areas in order to come up with a cohesive plan of development for the entire area.

During a meeting with nine residents Wednesday, Anderson invited two to four interested residents to form an advisory committee to help with the study.

City staff also will attempt to iron out an agreement with CalTrans to solve the problems with excessive traffic on 19th Street, which also is State Route 30.

The residents, however, were disturbed at the change in vote after they left. Carpenter asked Assistant City Manager Mike Matlock to call one of the speakers to let them know what happened.

'We were at that time sitting down having a bottle of champagne," said another resident who spoke at the meeting, Janet Lee.

"After weeks of hard work, preparation, time and money, we felt we had accomplished our task and won a fair decision ... and we were outraged with our 11 p.m. phone call (from Matlock)," she said, in a prepared statement from the group.

"We're shocked at the lack of integrity on the part of certain City Council members to exclude the interested citizens of Upland from the decisionmaking process," she added.

Carpenter has been thinking about the reversal also.

"Prior to the recess I was discussing that we've got to involve the entire area. In my poor way I was trying to find a way to answer the problems which we weren't addressing, particularly Liberty Groves (site of the proposed project)," Carpenter said.

It was during the break, he said, that he realized that he should have suggested postponing a vote until the entire area had been studied, rather than voting for the appeal against the project. He adds that he did not talk to fellowship members during that time and only discussed it with the City Attorney Don Maroney and the mayor.

Carpenter, who was on the Planning Commission for 14 years, was disturbed at the lack of long-term planning, he said.

'My point was if, in fact, the council had made a mistake, the five of us were still there ... we shouldn't leave an issue if we were unhappy with it," he said. He had Matlock call to warn the residents who had left because he didn't want them to go to bed that night thinking the issue had been resolved, only to find out the opposite the next day in the newspaper.

"I hated to put all those people through that," he said. "but regardless of all the heat I have to take personally, it was the right thing to do."

The change in vote does not necessarily mean the church/ school complex will go in at Campus Avenue and 19th Street, the mayor explained to the residents Wednesday.

It simply allows the council more time to study the issue. Unless the traffic congestion can be worked out with CalTrans or the city can solve the problem itself, the project probably will not be viable, he said.

R.C. identity yet to penetrate most minds

By Patrick McGreevy

The identity of the city of Rancho Cucamonga is real on the maps and in census and tax charts but it still hasn't eclipsed the identity of it's three communities in many residents'

"Nobody says 'I'm from Rancho Cucamonga' unless they're a newcomer. They say 'I'm from Alta Loma, or Etiwanda, or Cucamonga," said Carl Lightfoot, superintendent of the Etiwanda School District.

"That's not going to change, maybe until a few generations die off," Lightfoot said. "It won't change at least for a few decades."

On Nov. 8, 1977 the votes of Etiwandans and Cucamongans and some Alta Lomans outnumbered a majority of the Alta Lomans and approved incorporation.

et,

es

Eight years after that vote the telephone book still lists residents as coming from Alta Loma or Etiwanda or Cucamonga. A letter addressed to Etiwanda without a zip code or the words "Rancho Cucamonga" still finds its way to the receiver.

Elementary schoolchildren attend class in either the Etiwanda, Cucamonga, Alta Loma or Central school districts.

On most of the letters to the editor of The Daily Report, the sender signs the city of residence as Alta Loma or Etiwanda.

There are still road signs that direct motorists to Alta Loma or Etiwanda.

On the other hand, deeds for new property are registered for Rancho Cucamonga, and the Etiwanda Water Company is being purchased for consolidation by the Cucamonga County Water District.

The city of Rancho Cucamonga's identity is being solidified by the purchase of new city signs and flags.

And although, eight years later, there is no centralized and permanent Rancho Cucamonga Civic Center, the City Council has set a meeting for Nov. 25 to discuss when such a facility may be built.

That Civic Center is proposed for a newly developing area on Haven Avenue that some say will give Rancho Cucamonga a center and help further solidify its identity.

A new, central post office is proposed for the new downtown, though the three communities will keep their post office branches, postal officials say.

"I don't think a city identity, which is a positive thing, necessarily means the annihlation of the three communities that went together originally to incorporate," said Mayor Jon Mikels, one of those guiding the city toward establishing a downtown and a "Rancho Cucmamonga" identity.

"I think the city identity and the historical identities of the three communities can coexist," he said.

Separate schools

One measure of the strength of the three communities' identities is the fact that there are still separate elementary school districts serving each community.

Although one candidate in this year's school board election campaigned on a platform urging consolidation of the school districts for efficiency's sake, there is no strong movement afoot for a merger.

"I think most people are sensitive to the fact that they want local control of the school districts," said Lightfoot. "The community identities play a part in that."

He said in 1962 and in 1966, local voters defeated election measures that would have consolidated the school districts within the Chaffey Joint Union High School District which serves Rancho Cucamonga and parts of Fontana, Ontario, Upland and Mt. Baldy.

Frank Cosca, superintendent of the Central School District.

(714) 599-2602

said that, generally, people do not want to give up their district's identity.

The arguments for efficiency in consolidation are disputed by Lightfoot, who uses the analogy of the federal, state and local governments.

"Which level of government is the least efficient? The largest, right? And the next least efficient is the state and so on,"

Fire services

One consolidation more likely is that of the Foothill Fire Protection District, which provides firefighting in Rancho Cucamonga, with the city government. However, even that consolidation is not expected soon, according to L. Dennis Michael, the fire chief.

"There have been (fire) board members who have made comments in passing that one of these days the district belongs to the city government," Michael said. "I think it's inevitable because (of) our problems with being dependent on county funding."

He said a study was started in 1981 about making the special district a subsidiary of the city but when new board members joined the board in an election that year, the study was terminated.

Michael said the city did not have the money to take over the fire district at the time, but may as the city's developing industry and business strengthens the tax base.

Promise kept?

Those who led the incorporation effort eight years ago did so to gain more local control of planning and development of the area and to avoid losing the three communities' identities through annexation to neighoring cities such as Ontario.

(714) 549-1596

Mon.-Thurs. 12-7, Fri. 12-8, Sat. 9-5, Sun. 11-3

Now some residents, such as Alta Loman Mary Barlow, feel the promises have gone unfulfilled.

"I think some of our predictions have come true," said Barlow, former head of the Citizens Against Tri-Community,

"Especially the predictions about heavy population," she said. "We are disappointed with the planning that's gone on. We had virgin territory here and now we're having so much growth. The growth isn't being controlled and it's affecting the quality of life."

Barlow said she is also disappointed to see the identities of the three communities not being maintained as promised. "There is still some semblance of the communities, but they are crumbling very quickly," she said. "It's becoming Rancho Cucamonga, the big blob. The really new people that are coming in don't really know there is an (Alta Loma) identity."

Paul Saldana, chairman of the Rancho Cucamonga Community Advisory Commission, said he thinks the identities have been maintained, largely through the

The commission was formed with five representatives from each of the three communities to continue giving each area a voice in local government. A statement of purpose adopted by the commission last month stated that the commission's formation was intended to give the identities of the three communities continued voice.

"That's what we're doing now when we refer to our area as 'Etiwanda." Saldana said. "We're not saying it in a negative sense, as if we were not part of the city. We're saying it because we're proud of our historical identity and it's easier to identify it that way than to say East Rancho Cucamonga."

R.C. council combats possible mining

By Patrick McGreevy

Facing the threat of land to the north being developed by mining companies, the Rancho Cucamonga City Council has begun studying the feasibility of annexing some of the land into the city.

The City Council Nov. 6 went on record opposing the state's proposed designation of certain property within the city and in its sphere of influence to the north as "regionally significant" for sand and gravel resources. Spheres of influence encompass areas outside the city limits which could one day be annexed.

In addition, the City Council asked its staff to "commence moving toward annexation" of property owned by the county Flood Control District in the sphere of influence north of the City Limits.

Councilman Dick Dahl made the motion, which starts the city staff studying potential annexation, saying, in part, that he feared the county would sell the land adjacent to the city to mining companies that would set up sand and gravel quarries.

"That's a beautiful area up there and I want to see it developed in a way befitting the city," Dahl said.

Already, a San Bernardino mining company has proposed one quarry on 485 acres owned by the county Flood Control District north of the city limits.

Fourth Street Rock Crushers Inc. is seeking to begin mining operations on property just north of Highland Avenue and east of the future extension of Milliken Avenue.

Although both the City Council and Rancho Cucamonga's Community Advisory Commission took stands against the proposal in July, the project is outside the city and on property under the jurisdiction of the county, giving the San Bernardino County Supervisors final say. An environmental impact report on the project is due out later this

The property to be battled over is the large alluvial fan at the foot of the San Gabriel Mountains where water from the mountains has deposited tons of sand and gravel.

Norm Johnson, president of Fourth Street Rock Crushers, said the area is one of the few remaining sources of construction material used in making concrete products that is close to the heavy building of San Bernardino County.

The state of California recognized that source after the legislature passed the Surface Mining and Reclamation Act in 1975 authorizing the State Mining and Geology Board to designate certain areas as significant resources to be conserved.

A hearing on the areas proposed for designation in and around Rancho Cucamonga is set for next Friday in Palm Springs.

"The designation of significant construction agregate resources has profound implications in local land use," wrote Jack Lam, the Community Development Director, to the City Council. "It means that local communities involved in the designation are to be required to amend their general plan, adopt ordinances and issue permits in accordance with state's policies in mining operation and reclamation."

City officials are not sure what effect their opposition to the designations will have on state officials who have the final vote.

Dahl said the annexation proposal was recently discussed by county officials at a meeting in Lake Arrowhead. He said county officials have given encouragement to the city to annex property. City Manager Lauren Wasserman was recently named, along with Fontana's city manager, to a committee to study possible annexations of county land into the cities.

"It would be great if we could do it (annexation)," Dahl said. "We know there's a lot of surplus county property in the sphere of influence that the county is thinking of letting go, of selling."

Besides fear of mining interests taking over the property, Dahl said he is also concerned about some developers who have expressed an interest in buying land, that have built housing projects elsewhere that Dahl feels are not up to Rancho Cucamonga's standards.

"It (annexation) let's us put our standards on the property's development so that what goes in there is more palatable to Rancho Cucamonga residents," he said.

There is still a general confusion on the proper age a child should first visit the dentist, $3\frac{1}{2}$ to $4\frac{1}{2}$ is the preferred age. The object is to prevent cavities and much unnecessary orthodontia in later years. If you wait until you see a cavity be asured there are probably more you can't see, as decay spreads like a common infection.

If a child is seen before problems develop, prevention of unnecessary fear, and crooked (over crowding) teeth, is possible. In many cases, in our office, correction has been started as young as seven years of age. Completed, in many cases, in two years. In some cases, timed early extractions and observation have eliminated any braces.

Riding program cut seen

By Kimberly Heinrichs

A program in Upland which offers horse-riding classes to the physically handicapped is facing possible extinction.

Two of the program's four horses are sick with a disease called toxic founder — an inflammation of the horse's foot, which is often accompanied by pain and lameness.

"If we don't get over the hump with some donations, I don't see how we can carry on," Mike Gill, president of Therapeutic Equestrians, said.

With two horses down, the equestrian group has already had to start canceling the 30 disabled riders who ride three times a week to keep fit. The program also provides recreation, confidence-building and emotional support, Gill said.

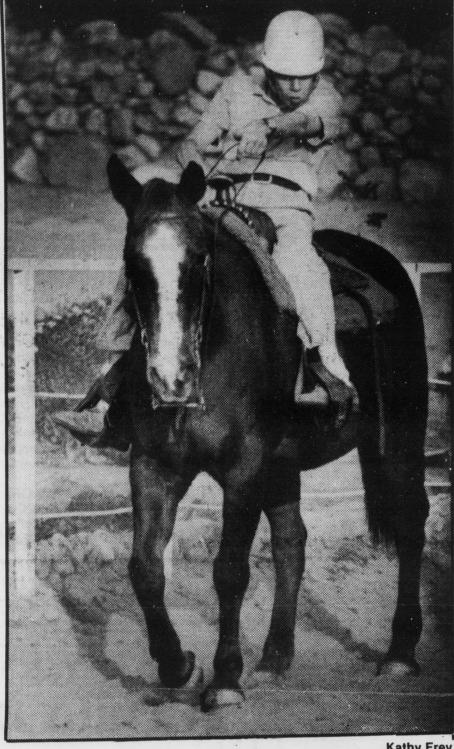

"When they don't ride, they're set back," explained volunteer Barbara Engel, a professional occupational therapist.

"Some of these kids live to come up here a couple times a week to ride," Gill added.

The non-profit group pays a monthly stable bill of $650 and now faces about $2,000 in veterinarian bills for the two sick horses. Money is needed more than horses, Gill said, because the group simply cannot afford to support any extra horses right now.

"Our main request is to ask for money from the community to help support us through these rough times we're going through," he explained.

Not only are program horses Randy and Fullproof sick, but one of the two horses being evaluated for the program, a 22year-old Arab gelding has come down with founder.

Gill explained that the veterinarian has not determined what caused the disease, although it was not the food. He said that the toxin could have been inhaled, ingested or transferred through the skin.

Randy, a 19-year-old chestnut quarterhorse gelding, is "recovering nicely," but Fullproof, a 15-year-old mare is not doing as well. She has_ CLASSES

R.C. council blasts at fellow member for her proposal

By Patrick McGreevy

A proposal to require future assessment districts in Rancho Cucamonga to be subject to a public vote was shot down last week by four members of the City Council in an angry tirade aimed at the proposal's author, Councilwoman Pam Wright.

Wright's policy proposal calling for the council to take the advice of the majority vote on assessments drew 30 minutes of stinging charges of political manuevering and misguidedness.

Council members were especially angry that Wright briefed the press on her proposal shortly after sending copies to the rest of the council but before the agenda for last Tuesday's meeting was made public.

Wright's motion for adoption of the policy died for lack of a second after the head of a citizen's group seeking an initiative to require assessment districts to be approved by a two-thirds vote said the new policy would not go far enough.

Councilman Dick Dahl gave the most extensive comments, reading from a statement that expressed anger and accusations.

"I accuse you, Mrs. Wright of soliciting personal political public support on an issue to purposely embarrass this council of which you are a member, for your own personal political gain," Dahl said.

He later added, "The (advisory election) cost to the city would be in the $20,000 to $25,000 range, the cost of one-half of a traffic signal, to achieve a worthless, non-binding decision that could reflect a minority opinion."

The policy would have been effective after Jan. 1, 1986 and would require certain assessment districts to be subject to a vote of those to be assessed, with the resulting majority opinion respected by the council.

Mayor Jon Mikels called the proposal a "sham" and Councilman Chuck Buquet said "this is the longest number of assembled words I've ever read that do absolutely nothing."

Councilman Jeff King said that Wright's policy betrays the representative form of democratic government.

He said the only citizens who would support it are those who don't trust their elected representatives and the only elected officials who would propose it would have to lack confidence in their own ability to make decisions for those he or she represents.

Wright argued that the policy is in response to a percleved wish of the citizens to have control over local taxes and assessments.

She accused the council of lambasting her personally rather than addressing their comments to the policy and said the policy would not affect the benefit assessment district approved by the City Council May 17 to finance two new parks.

"Even after the lambasting, I still feel it was worth it to own up to my conscience," she said.

Michael Mahoney, the chairman of the Cucamonga Citizens Coalition - Political Action Committee said his group supports "Wright's conscience" and feels her proposal is a "step in the right direction."

But Mahoney said the policy would not bind the council to vote with the majority decision of the special election so it is not sufficient.

He said his group will instead continue collecting signatures on petitions for an initiative that would require all assessment districts to be approved by a two-thirds vote of the residents effected.

Mental health bond financing denied

By Patrick McGreevy

The members of Rancho Cucamonga's City Council continued their opposition to providing bond financing for a 190-bed psychiatric health facility by denying the funding proposal a second time Nov. 6.

Council members acting in their capacity as the governors of the city's Redevelopment Agency expressed concern over the need for such a facility and the appropriateness of its location.

The council voted as the Redevelopment Agency's governing board not to approve an inducement resolution that would have given the agency's intent to issue $6.8 million in bonds for the project.

Councilman Dick Dahl pointed out that one other psychiatric hospital is already proposed for Rancho Cucamonga and another mental health facility is proposed for Fontana on the Rancho Cucamonga border.

"I would not like to see Rancho Cucamonga become to mental hospitals what Chino is to prisons," Dahl said.

Continental Care Inc. was requesting the Redevelopment Agency's assistance in arranging government-backed, tax-exempt financing for the mental health facility proposed for the Rancho Cucamonga Business Park.

The facility proposed for the intersection of White Oak and Elm avenues would include a 130-bed skilled nursing facility and a 60-bed board-and-care home for those with psychiatric problems.

The City Council, acting as the governing board of the Redevelopment Agency, had in June refused to announce intent to issue bonds for the project, saying they wanted the Planning Commission to review the proposal first.

The commission last week gave its initial approval to the development.

But council members were still not convinced of its suitability or need Wednesday.

Councilman Jeff King said he continues to be concerned with the facility's location.

A spokesman for Continental, Fred Jackson, said his company has already received an indication from the state that it intends to approve the required certificate of need for construction of the facility.

R.C. tree debate discussed, but decision is delayed

By Patrick McGreevy

The issue of whether Rancho Cucamonga's Blue Gum eucalyptus trees should be replaced as development occurs was discussed last week but not resolved.

A vote was delayed Nov. 6 on the city's proposed new tree preservation ordinance after citizens and council members expressed opposition to a provision calling for the most prevalent variety of eucalyptus trees in the city to be replaced as development occurs.

The City Council heard almost an hour of testimony on the issue before slating the proposed ordinance for further discussion and a possible first reading on Nov. 20.

The new ordinance seeks to strengthen the regulations for tree preservation, including those levying fines for illegal removal of trees.

Controversy surrounds a general policy statement contained in the ordinance that says the blue gum eucalyptus should be gradually replaced "as development occurs" with a less messy and less dangerous variety of eucalyptus tree.

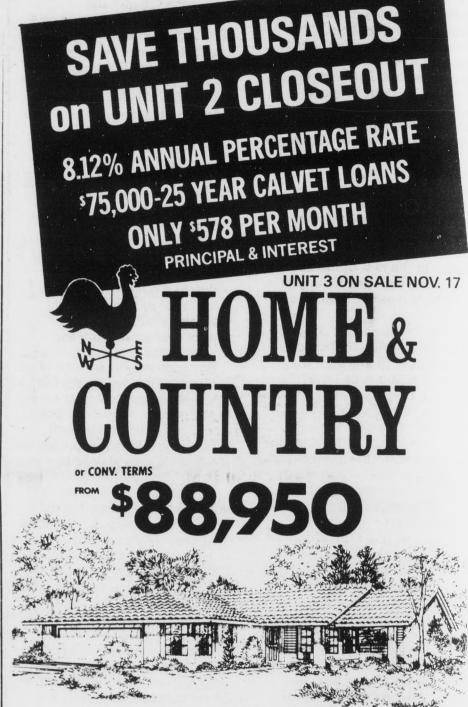

The replacement is aimed at maintaining the city's many eucalyptus wind breaks and, with them, the historic character of the city.

Residents like Kevin Eggleston, Sharon Romero, Jim Frost and Bruce Emory testified that they oppose wholesale removal of the blue gum variety and urged the council to preserve the tree in areas where it cannot cause harm to people nor damage to property.

"You can't change your community's heritage," said Eggleston. "You can only destroy it if you go with the wholesale replacement of the blue gums."

The Planning Commission had recommended the variety of tree be gradually replaced during development because of it's tendency, on days that or windy or not, to drop heavy limbs that could damage houses built under them.

Kiwanis Club prepares for senior award

The Upland Kiwanis Club is seeking nominees for its outstanding senior citizen's award, which is presented at its annual senior citizen Christmas-Chanukah party.

According to Greg Standlea, chairman of the nomination committee, candidates should reside in the Upland area, be at least 65 years old, and have applied their skills and talents to the community by contributing in some fashion to enriching the lives of others on a voluntary basis. Nominees may be previous award recipients; however, members of the Upland Kiwanis and their families are ineligible. The deadline for submitting nominations is Nov.

To submit names of nominees or for more information regarding the senior citizen Christmas party, contact Greg Standlea at 982-1516.

Chaffey College teachers near pact

By Marianne Aiken

If attorneys for the Chaffey Community College District approve a tentative two-year contract, 193 Chaffey College faculty members are expected to vote on ratifying the agreement Friday.

The agreement marks a turning point in a 17-month-old standoff between the faculty and the district.

The breakthrough came Friday, Nov. 8, after two days of informal talks between administrators and the Chaffey College Teachers Association (CCTA).

The tentative agreement will not put any more money in teachers' pockets this year, but includes some possible increases for the 1986-87 school year, said intirim president/superintendent Otto Roemmich.

Certificated faculty members, who have been working without a contract since June 30, 1984, are expected to vote on ratifying the agreement a week from today, and the district governing board will take it up at its Nov. 21 meeting.

The dispute went to a factfinding mediator Oct. 25, but only one mediation session was held before the two sides agreed to go back to the bargaining table on Wednesday, Nov. 6.

An informal atmosphere and face-to-face talks were instrumental in getting the dispute settled, said Roemmich.

"I think that both the union and management people decided that we've got to resolve it," Roemmich said, explaining the breakthrough. "Neither one of us had our outside negotiatiors with us. I was sort of the spokesperson for our side but I used my two vice presidents and director of personnel. We all did some talking. It was not a formal session. It was an informal session with a lot of discussion of ideas."

Vice President for Instructional Services, Mike Alexander, Acting Director of Personnel, Pat Morrison, and Vice President for Student Services, Robert Harris represented the district in the informal talks, along with Roemmich.

CCTA president Gil Extale, vice president Priscilla Fernandez, and elected negotiators Frank Pinkerton and Richard Clements spoke for the faculty.

"The association is extremely pleased that we have been able to settle in an amicable fashion," Extale said.

Everyone loves a parade

Ricks Burns sat with his family in lawn chairs by the side of Base Line Road Saturday and grinned as a marching band passed in the Seventh Annual Founders Day Parade.

He was thinking how glad he was that he chose to move his family to Rancho Cucamonga two months ago from New Jersey. Maybe there isn't this show of community involvement all the time, he allowed, but he was impressed that the city he had chosen for his family's new home was hosting two large community events in as many months.

"It's the kind of community I was hoping to settle in," he said. "I'd like to live here forever. It's things like this (parade) and the Grape Harvest Festival (last month) that make it so special."

Burns was one of approximately 5,000 local residents to huddle against cool temperatures and the threat of rain Saturday morning to watch the parade celebrating the city's eighth anniversary of incorporation.

Although both children and adults enjoyed the parade of marching bands, floats, fire engines and horseback riders, adults also were able to appreciate what the parade represented for the city where they live.

"I really like Rancho Cucamonga so this is nice," said
Tami Rathburn, as the parade approached at 10 a.m.

"I like the suburban areas, the mountains, the lack of crime," she said.

Floyd Herndon has lived in Alta Loma for 12 years and although he was originally against the city's incorporation, he liked the city holding a parade to mark it's begining.

"I think it's really nice to give the city some recognition," he said. "This (parade) is something that people in the community can get behind."

Herndon brought his grandchildren out to watch the parade featuring 194 entries led by the host band from Etiwanda High School.

The parade moved slowly up Base Line Road from Carnelian Avenue to Archibald Avenue passing the city hall offices near Hellman Avenue.

But all of the City Council was in the parade, including Mayor Jon Mikels who was grand marshal.

Children shouted to those riding on a fire engine from the Foothill Fire Protection District, to kids dressed like grapes on the Chamber of Commerce's float and to McGruff, the crime prevention dog, a costumed man who ran from one side of the street to the other hugging children.

Children also beckoned to strolling merchants who sold grape-like purple balloons, cotton candy, peanuts, popcorn and Cracker Jacks.

On the sidewalks, members of a local political group sought signatures on petitions for an initiative requiring assessment districts to be put to a citizen vote.

A nearby bank clock showed the temperature to be 61-degrees at the 10 a.m. start. Heavy dark clouds hung around the mountains to the north but rain did not marr the parade.

The theme of this year's parade was "Industry on Parade" and several leaders of industry, including Phil Schlosser and Ralph Lewis, rode in the parade. In addition some of the floats had industrial themes.

Residents of Rancho Cucamonga and a small part of Ontario will pay 11 percent more in water rates starting Dec. 1, as a result of a recent vote by the governing board of the Cucamonga County Water District.

A lack of sufficient rainfall and the increased cost of buying water elsewhere is being blamed for the need to increase the rates, according to Lloyd Michael, general manager of the water district.

The rate hike affecting approximately 20,000 residences was unanimously approved Nov. 5 by the district's board of directors.

The bimonthly "water availability" charge, paid as the base charge by all homeowners with a water meter, will increase from $5 to $5.60.

At the same time, the residential rate per 100 cubic feet of water will climb from the present 37 cents to 41 cents on bills sent out after Dec. 1, according to Michael.

Michael said the rate increase is the first one in the district in four years.

"Inflation alone over the last four years has been far in excess of 11 percent," Michael said. "We've been frugal these last four years but inflation and other increased costs have caught up with us so we need this increase to bring us out of a deficit situation."

Even with the rate increase, the district's 1985-86 budget faces a deficit "in the low thousands of dollars," Michael said.

One of the key reasons for the deficit is the lack of inexpensive rainwater coming down from the mountains and the resulting increased cost of buying water from other sources.

"Weather changes so much; it makes a difference to us financially," Michael said.

He said for the first time in the water district's history, it has had to purchase water from the Metropolitan Water District (MWD) to make up for the lack of rainfall and the new residential development of the area.

As of July 1, the district had bought $200,000 worth of MWD water, Michael said.

He said that the board agreed to review the rate structure a year from now to determine whether the costs for providing water warrant a further rate increase or reduction.

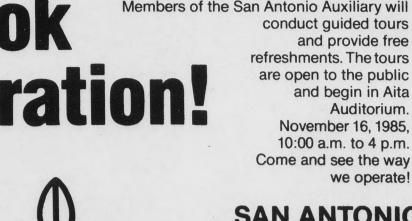

The district provides water and sewer services for the residences of Rancho Cucamonga, the part of Ontario north of Fourth Street and east of Vineyard Avenue and the unincorporated county area north of the Rancho Cucamonga city limits.

The idea of building around the trees appealed to Councilwoman Pam Wright. Councilman Dick Dahl also said he supports saving blue gum windrows that are away from developments and people.

Council member Chuck Buguet and Mayor Jon Mikels said the council is aware of the blue gum's place in the city's heritage and argued that the proposed new policy would not result in the wholesale replacement of the tree.

"I think that what we're trying to accomplish is a phased approach to what happens when these trees grow old and dangerous," said Mikels.

Councilman Jeff King said he thinks the problem with the proposed ordinance is its inclusion of citrus and nutbearing trees under protection of the ordinance's preservation regulations.

Baldy ski operators show plan to expand

By Kimberly Heinrichs

Mt. Baldy ski resort operators unveiled a plan to expand the ski area last week.

About 20 residents showed up at a meeting to hear the plan to add four chairlifts and 320 acres of new skiing area. Twice that many attended a meeting in Lytle Creek the night before.

"We expected a lot more opposition," said Larry Christianson, president of Alpine Consultants Inc., which is handling the environmental assessment process for resort owner Western Resorts Inc.

He said the main concern of residents was the additional traffic the development would bring through town and on the sharply-curving mountain road. That concern will be studied in the traffic report, he added.

Another concern was the management's ability to handle erosion problems in view of past problems, said Bill Woodland, U.S. Forest Service recreation manager for the Mt. Baldy area.

Christianson added that there have been problems with erosion under a lift along Sugar Pine

This is the first week of the six-month environmental review process. Public comments will be accepted until Dec. 6, Christianson said.

The new area is on the back side of the present Mt. Baldy ski area to Stockton Flats, according to construction project manager Mike Klinefelter.

The 10-year, $5 million expansion will increase the capacity of skiers from 2,200 to 3,900, Christianson said. The Top of the Notch restaurant - being rebuilt after a fire earlier this year - is designed for possible enlargement to handle the extra crowd.

While Lytle Creek residents expressed concern about a new road being built through their area as an entrance to the new ski runs, Christianson said that fear was unfounded.

"Everything will be handled by Mt. Baldy (Village)," he said, adding that there are both advantages and drawbacks to the tiny village, "It will help the community's economy, but there might be environmental drawbacks like parking and additional traffic."

The area is already included in the resort's 1979 permit, but it did not get permission to construct there until last year, Woodland said.

Its permit was appealed by the Sierra Club, but upheld later by the chief of the forest service, he said.

The Sierra Club's environmental concerns were primarily that an expanded resort would disturb a longhorn sheep habitat, endangered and extrememly sensitive plants, avalanche potential and erosion of soils, according to Woodland.

Western Resorts was required to take five years of surveys and collected "rather concrete data," he said, which resulted in mitigation of the concerns.

Although the present area remains open during the summer, the Stockton Flats side will be closed then in order not to interfere with the mountain sheep which pass through the area during that season, Woodland said.

In addition, the summer closure will help protect the endangered flowering plant, Tierson's Spring Beauty, he added. In the winter, the plant will be protected by the snow cover.

The forest service has also prohibited construction of actual ski runs in the new area, limiting it to glade skiing. Because there will be no grading, erosion of the soils is less likely, Woodland said.

Two ski lifts will be built on the Lytle Creek side.

Ken Burns, 30, of Montclair, left, completed the Ironman Triathlon in Hawaii this year in 14 hours and 56 seconds. Alan Carlisle, 55, of Upland, completed the triathlon in 13 hours and 32 minutes, qualifying for next year's race.

Triathletes insist anybody can do it

By Marianne Aiken

Two local men who ran the ultimate endurance race three weeks ago said Hawaii's Ironman triathlon is a reachable goal for anyone with patience, discipline and determination.

The Ironman, held every year in Kona, on the main island of Hawaii, puts contestants through a grueling 2.4 mile swim in the ocean, a 112-mile bike ride and a 26.2 mile run through sungrilled lava fields.

Alan Carlisle, a 55-year-old Upland attorney, and Ken Burns, a 30-year-old Montclair engineering consultant, took different approaches to their training. Carlisle got in on the fitness craze when it first began in the late '60s, but Burns started working out just two years ago, when, by his own See IRONMAN/Page 22 description, he was an overweight desk jockey.

"If you had asked me a year ago if I'd be going out on a Saturday and running a 20 mile fun run, I'd have laughed at you," Burns said.

For Burns, competing in the Ironman removed much of the mystique surrounding what has been called "the sport of the '80s."

"I'm living proof that the people who do that aren't something to be held in awe or mystique or thought of as super athletes. If anything, people who run in triathlons are super disciplined.

"Afterwards, I thought it wasn't that difficult, it certainly wasn't mythical," Burns said.

Carlisle, on the other hand, said it takes many long hours over a period of years to train for a triathlon.

They both agreed the key is to start out small and go slow. Carlisle recommended that first-time runners should try walking a block, then running a block until they can work up to running a mile, then add 10 percent onto their distance every week or whenever they feel up to it.

"There's nothing wrong with jogging and walking to extend your mileage," Burns agreed. "That's the key, to extend your mileage."

"You have the rest of your life to work up to 26 miles," said Carlisle.

"The training does become a drag," Burns said. "You have to do it every day or you won't make it."

Burns started out by training for a short race.

"Since I was a non-swimmer, my goal was just not to drown," he said. He swam all summer to train for a race in August.

"I remember running and I could not run two miles. The race I was training for was a 10 kilometer. I thought 'this is crazy, I could never run six miles."

"I found out two miles is kind of the warm-up period and everybody feels that bad after two miles. I may not run six miles quickly but I can run it."

Most runners start feeling comfortable after about two miles, Burns said. After that, each one gets easier.

Carlisle described the Ironman as very "hot, humid, and lonely." Kona's average high humidity in the coolest part of the evening is 85 percent. The average low humidity is 40 percent in the heat of the day.

He ran the 2½ hours of the race in the dark. The outline of the road could be seen ocassionally when cars passed, and the runners were given light sticks about the size of pens, so they could see where the other runners were. But other than that, there was no light after the sun went down. The race started early in the morning.

He thanked his wife, Cherie, for forcing him on when he felt like quitting.

"She gave me total support," Carlisle said of his wife. "I was so exhausted at the transition points between events, and she was there cheering. That gives you the extra spurt of energy."

For four months prior to the race, Carlisle trained 4-10 hours per day. He swam 10 miles a week at 6:30 a.m. at Chaffey College under the tutelage of swimming coach Mike Dickson; bicycled 200-300 miles a week with biking pro Jim McKernon, ran 75 miles a week; and worked out with weights three times a week.

Burns started training intensely in March, then got tired and burned out in August. When he resumed training, he injured his leg, just weeks before the Ironman.

"I think I was overtraining.
Then I panicked, thinking I'd pulled back too much, and that's when I got hurt. It was like trying to cram for a final, only you can't do that physically.

Burns started running 2-3 miles a day 5 days a week through February, then in March started increasing to 20 miles a week. Gradually he increased to 45 miles a week by May, and held 45 miles a week through the summer. Then he pulled back to 20 miles a week, and crammed 50-60 miles a week toward the end

"I feel like this is something anybody can do if they have the discipline to go out and do it," Burns said.

"SATISFACTION ALWAYS GUARANTEED"

Firm puts old ideas into novel products

By Gary McNulty

Old-fashioned ideas are packed into high-tech devices at Jade Controls.

The Upland firm's primary business is making and marketing setback thermostats, devices which automatically do what people have to walk across cold floors to do: turn up the heater in the morning after it's been low all night.

Jim Yarter, Jade executive vice president, said the setback offers savings on electric bills of 20 percent to 40 percent a month.

Bill Ford, district supervisor for Southern California Gas Co... agreed that turning the heater down at night and up in the morning saves energy, but said it would be difficult to say how much.

The company has been in operation for 20 years, all in Upland, Yarter said. It started out producing pilot light controls for heater makers, then expanded into related product areas.

Now Jade's setback thermostats face competition only from heating giants Honeywell and Robertshaw, Yarter said. Yarter declined to discuss the private company's sales figures.

The thermostat can also be programmed to maintain a temperature, Yarter said, turning on the air conditioner or heater as needed.

And if that isn't enough, Jade also sells a thermostat that can be programmed differently for weekends and weekdays.

Yarter said Jade offers two types of setback thermostats: a commercial model and a residential thermostat.

The industrial thermostat retails at a price of $150, while

The group meets at Light House Brethren in Christ on the corner of Hellman and Base Line Road in Alta Loma at 7 p.m. in the north room. For more information, call 987-0233.

The New Life Ministries of Rancho Cucamonga holds "Search for Truth Non-Denominal Bible Studies" at 7:30 p.m. at the Rancho Cucamonga Neighborhood Center, 9161 Arrow Highway.

Upland Chess Club meets from 7 to 11 p.m. in the Community Center, 352 E. C the residential model is priced at $65, Yarter said.

A standard thermostat costs about $40.

The technology of the products that Jade produces continually changes. Yarter said. Just as with calculators, that means prices of Jade products will probably decrease.

Jade's thermostats are sold through retailers. The company also still makes pilot light controls and generators, parts used in manufacturing heaters.

The pilot light control works as a safety mechanism by breaking the circuit if a hot water heater of furnace overheats, Yarter said. The controls can withstand quite of bit of overheating, too - up to 1,450 degrees.

The generators are primarily used in swimming pool heaters.

Jade Controls employs 150 people, Yarter said, most in either electronic or basic mechinial assembly.

Upland takes aim at share of Baseline title

After the first two games of this season, Upland High School had a 0-2 record. While it might have rattled others, first-year head coach Pete Merandi was firm in his convictions his team would turn it around.

On the third Friday, Merandi made believers. Upland blasted Northview by a 41-0 score and started a drive that has left the Highlanders one win short of tying for the Baseline League championship.

Upland has already secured a spot in the postseason CIF tournament with its 5-1 Baseline League. But a win Friday night at home against Damien will give Merandi at least a share of first place.

Upland is 6-3 for the

That's not an unfamiliar position for Merandi. He served as defensive coordinator for Claremont the past three seasons when the Wolfpack either won the Baseline title outright or shared honors.

Getting there will be a challenge for the Scots. Damien, Claremont and Upland are part of a three-way logiam at the top, so something has to give Friday between Upland and Damien.

Both schools lost to Claremont for their lone league loss. The Scots dropped a 35-10 contest while Damien was a 21-0 loser.

Damien also got off to a poor start. The Spartans of coach Dick Larsen lost their first three non-league games before rolling to a four-game winning streak stopped by Claremont.

Woodside in finals

Chaffey College will be represented in the state Community College Cross Country championships Saturday in Fresno by freshman Terri Woodside.

Woodside became the lone Panther to advance to the state finals by virtue of her 19th place overall finish last week in the Southern California regionals at Bonelli Park.

Woodside finished in the 17th scoring position over the thremile course in 17:50 to wrap up a spot. She was among the top 15 individials not associated with the top five teams to cross the line.

Saturday's competition over the 3.1-mile (5,000 meters) course at Woodpark Park begins at 10:45 a.m.

Brault among hopefuls at skating event

Approximately 100 figure skaters ranging from juvenile through intermediate, novice, junior and senior levels representing clubs in Southern California, Arizona and Las Vegas will compete in the 1986 Southwest Pacific Regional Championships at Newbury Park.

Sanctioned by the United State Figure Skating Association (USFSA) the program is hosted by the host Conejo Figure Skating Club.

According to Gayle Bondio, president of the Conejo Valley Figure Skating Club (CVFSC), Phase II of the competition was scheduled to begin today at noon with senior men's competition. The balance of the day includes intermediate ladies, juvenile girls, novice men and winds up at 6:50 p.m. with intermediate level competition in dance.

Friday's program lists senior ladies at 11 a.m., followed by competitions in six different categories, concluding with senior men at 8:50 p.m.

The Saturday schedule, featuring competitions in 15 categories begins at 7 a.m., includes precision teams and concludes with senior men at 8:50 p.m.

Sunday's finals get underway at 8 a.m. finishing at 5:50 p.m. with award ceremonies.

Stand-out senior men competitors slated to go for the gold, silver or bronze include John Filbig of Blue Jay, who placed 12th at the 1985 Kansas City National Championships; Pat Brault of Upland, sixth place finisher in junior mens at K.C.; Erik Larson of Julian, second in junior men at K.C.; and Cindy Bortz of Tarzana, a novice class silver medalist in the 1985 Nationals.

"The USFSA is the governing body for figure skating in the nationa," said Bondio. "The three major qualifying competitions heading to the 'top' consist of annual regionals (such as our present meet), sectionals and nationals. Skaters advance up the competitive ladder via regionals and sectionals to the nationals.

"USFSA Figure Skaters who place in the top four mens, ladies, pairs and dance - of the nationals are eligible to compete in annual world championships and quadrennial winter olympics," said Bondio.

This is the route taken by skating greats of the past such as Scott Hamilton, Peggy Flemming, Dick Button and Tenley Albright.

When You're Not Sure if it's Minor or Serious, You Want Secure Care.

You're not a medical expert, so you're not always sure how serious an illness or accident may be.

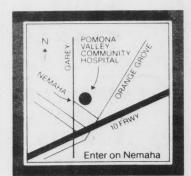

That's why Pomona Valley Community Hospital developed Secure Care right next to its Emergency Room.

When you arrive at the emergency entrance, a special nurse will determine the severity of the problem. Serious emergencies are directed to the Emergency Room. Less serious problems are directed to Secure Care.

Secure Care has its own staff and separate treatment rooms to provide you with fast, efficient and inexpensive care. Secure Care is available for treating all types of minor illnesses and injuries from cuts and broken fingers to sore throats and flus.

If a person is unconscious, not breathing or bleeding badly, call 911.

Quake-resistant building in R.C. may have started trend

By Marianne Aiken

The 5.0 Oct. 2 earthquake centered in Loma Linda may have signalled the start of a new trend in construction in seismic zones.

Last month's quake was the first time innovative shock absorbers, called "base isolators," were tested on a building during an earthquake.

The county's new Law and Justice Center in Rancho Cucamonga was the first building in the United States to be tested using this method, consisting of 98 short, black cylinders of alternating rubber and steel layers in the building's base. The building shook less at the top than the bottom as compared to three other buildings being monitored

The 250,000 square foot, four-story, $38.9 million Law and Justice Center is 80 percent complete and is expected to open sometime next spring. It is the largest and most expensive county government building.

"I'm enthused about it," said Robert G. Wilkinson, project manager for the Architecture and Engineering Division of San Bernardino County's General Services Agency.

"As far as we know, this is the first building in the United States and the largest in the world to use base isolators."

The isolators, made of laminate steel and rubber, 32 inches in diameter, and 16 inches tall, are designed to take up to 1.3 million pounds of pressure each.

"They're relatively flexible in a horizontal direction," Wilkinson said. "They're designed to flex up to 16 inches in a major earthquake of 8.3 on the Richter scale. There's a 16-inch space around the building so it can move."

"The relative cost of the installation is relatively little compared to the possible cost savings (of having to replace a destroyed building), depending on the design of the building," said Wilkinson. The building was monitored by the state Division of Mines and Geology. About half a dozen buildings around the area have instrumentation which measures movement.

"They are particularly interested in our building because it reduced the effects of the earthquake," said Wilkinson. "That is kind of a historic thing. It's the first time a building on base isolation has been instrumented and gone through an earthquake.

Although it is possible to reduce the effect of an earthquake 10 times through the base isolation method, "I wouldn't say our building is designed to do that," said Wilkinson. "These buildings are designed for large earthquakes. If it was designed for small earthquakes, the wind would move it back and forth."

Fabulous gift ideas for a seamstress

By Betty W. Kinser Copley News Service

Here are some great gift ideas for the seamstress.

"Seams Great"/"Seam Saver"

— This tricot-like binding comes or 34 inches wide in black, natural or white. It is marvelous for finishing raw edges, making narrow casings, hemming, etc. Under $3.

Fabric, patterns, thread — Do not buy any of these for someone else unless you know for certain what she prefers. Nothing is more worthless than fabric, pattern or thread you can't use.

Bobbins — If you know what type bobbin is used, please buy several! Anyone who sews much at all never has enough bobbins. Prices vary depending on type and number of bobbins in each package.

Lamp — I have found the clamp-on swivel lamp to be indispensable. It puts the light right on your work and does not take up any table space. It can be swung out of the way when not needed. From $20 up.

Sleeve board — There are several types, but I prefer the simple wooden ones with one side padded, the other bare. This gives you a raw wood surface for "pounding" wool. Under $10.

Pressing ham — Buy a good one! One side should be wool, the other cotton. A nice addition is a "ham stand" for holding the ham in place as you work. Hams $10 and up.

Cutting board — Again, buy quality. It should have 1-inch grid, bias lines, scallop lines and measurement markings. Under $10.

YOUR SOCIAL SECURITYEasy to get personal record of Social Security history

Copley News Service

Q. Recently I saw an ad telling how you could get a complete history of your earnings from Social Security for payment of a fee. I always thought this information could be obtained free of charge. — K.O.

A. It is not necessary to pay for information regarding your earnings record.

To get a statement of earnings covered by Social Security, all a person has to do is complete a Form 7004, available free at any Social Security office, complete it and mail it. In return, you will receive an extract of your Social Security record.

There also is no cost involved in changing your name on Social Security records.

Q. I receive benefits for my five small children based on my deceased husband's work record.

Recently I received a form that listed the names of the children and asked if they lived with me. Why did I get this? — R.M.

A. Recent court orders and legislation require Social Security to review the activities of representative payees more frequently.

Parents and spouses with custody are required to verify that they continue to live in the same household with the beneficiary.

Q. My husband, age 65, is retiring. I understand that benefits will be payable to me and our 14-year-old son.

How long will I be entitled to checks? I am 55 years old. —

A. When a spouse is under age 62, and the child in her care attains age 16, her benefits are discontinued. You again will be entitled to spouse's benefits when you reach age 62.

Q. I filed a claim with Social Security and was turned down. I'm thinking about getting a lawyer to help me. Do I need legal help? — C.T.

A. People generally do not need a representative in their dealings with Social Security. However, a claimant has the right to appoint an attorney or other qualified individual to represent him.

To protect the interests of the claimants, the Social Security Act requires that the fee charged by the representative for services performed be set by the Social Security Administration. Contact your local Social Security office for additional information.

Questions on Social Security may be sent to Eugene Williams, Social Security Office, P.O. Box 82727, San Diego, CA 92138. Public Notice

Planning Commision seat open following resignation

A seat on Upland's Planning Commission is open following commissioner Edward Sloman's resignation last week.

Sloman, who was recently elevated to president of the Los Angeles division of Covington Homes in San Dimas, felt he was not able to give enough time to the commission.

"If I'm going to be in something, I'm going to dedicate myself to it," the seven-year veteran and former chairman of the commission said.

His new position allows him little free time, and he wants to spend it with his family, he said. The long hours also have forced him to be absent from several commission meetings, he said.

Sloman's current four-year term was to have expired in 1988.

The City Council now is searching for a replacement. An appointment may be made as early as Nov. 15.

ORDINANCE NO. 1362

AN INTERIM ORDINANCE OF THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF UPLAND RELATING TO THE USE OF PREMISES FOR ADULT ENTERTAINMENT FACILITIES

The City Council of the City of Upland does hereby ordain as

SECTION 1: FINDINGS AND DECLARATION OF INTENT SECTION 1: FINDINGS AND DECLARATION OF INTENT. It has come to the attention of the City of Upland that there is now a business in the City which is contemplating the furnishing of entertainment and/or selling paraphernalia, books and other supplies for adult entertainment and/or which is now furnishing and selling the same illegally. The proposed business is one of first impression in the City and there has been no in-depth consideration of the potential deleterious ramifications relating to the location of said huginess in the City.

said business in the City.
COUNCIL FINDS THAT:

COUNCIL FINDS THAT:

1. Certain types of adult entertainment facilities possess certain objectionable operational characteristics which when concentrated can have deleterious effect upon adjacent areas.

2. Location of certain adult entertainment facilities in the vicinity of facilities frequented by minors is likely to cause the exposure of said minors to adult material which, because of their immaturity, may adversely affect them. In addition, the Council recognizes that many persons are offended by the public display of certain sexual materials.

many persons are offended by the public display of certain sexual materials.

3. That special regulation of these uses is necessary to assure that these adverse effects will either constitute or contribute to the blighting or downgrading of the surrounding neighborhood and have an adverse effect on minors.

4. That by reason of the objectionable operational characteristics of the adult entertainment facilities when concentrated and when conducted in the proximity of facilities frequented by minors causing the exposure of minors to adult material, there is a current and immediate threat to the public health, safety and welfare.

5. That the approval of permits and/or the continued operation of any adult entertainment facility furnishing and/or selling any adult entertainment paraphernalia, books or adult materials or any other applicable establishment for said use without a study of the zoning in relationship to the type of zones in which the use should be placed or the concentration of the uses in the zone and the spacing of said uses from other facilities existent which are frequented by Attorney for petitioner: JAMES A. GROSS, 337 N. children and which may be otherwise sensitive or affected by said uses, will result in a threat to the public health, safety and welfare.

6. That it is necessary to initiate a study by the City to address the concerns expressed by the findings set forth above establishing the zone in which said uses may operate and to adopt an urgency Vineyard Avenue, Suite 400, Ontario, CA 91764. /s/JAMES A. GROSS Attorney for Petitioner Publish: November 14, 21, 28, ordinance prohibiting any said uses above mentioned until said study is completed. SECTION 2. PURPOSE.

(DC26197) The purpose of this ordinance is to require that every use set forth herein in any zone of the City, whether or not the said use is permissible under existing zoning regulations, may not be under taken until a comprehensive study is made of the zonings in which said use may be appropriate and the conditions under which said NOTICE OF DEATH OF LARRY E. JOHNSON AND OF PETITION TO use may be permitted.

SECTION 3. NO USE PERMITS TO BE ISSUED.

For a period of forty-five (45) days from the adoption of this ordinance, no permit or business license shall be processed or granted by the City of Upland for the furnishing of adult entertainment and/or the selling of any adult entertainment paraphernalia, books, or adult materials. "Adult entertainment" shall include but not be limited to the following: An adult business where employees or patrons exposs specified anatomical areas or shall include but not be limited to the following: An adult business where employees or patrons expose specified anatomical areas or engage in specified sexual activities and any other business or establishment characterized by more than one incidental or occasional portrayal of matter depicting, exposing, describing, discussing or relating to "specified sexual activities" or "specified anatomical areas"; adult book stores depicting, describing or relating to specified sexual activities or specified anatomical areas relating to specified sexual activities or specified anatomical areas or an establishment with a segment or section devoted to the sale or display of such material; adult motel or hotel; adult minimotion picture theater consisting of an enclosed building with a capacity of less than fifty (50) persons used for presenting material distinguished or characterized by more than one (1) incidental or occasional portrayal of matter depicting or relating to specified sexual activities or specified anatomical areas for observation by patrons therein; adult motion picture arcade; adult motion picture theater; encounter center or rap studio where two or more persons congregate, assemble or associate with the primary purposes of engaging in, describing or discussing specified sexual activities or specified anatomical areas and/or figure model studio. The specified sexual activities shall be deemed to include fondling or touching of human genitals, pubic region, buttocks or female specified sexual activities shall be deemed to include fondling or touching of human genitals, pubic region, buttocks or female breasts, sexual acts, normal or perverted, actual or simulated, including but not limited to intercourse, oral copulation or sodomy, masturbation, whether actual or simulated, and excretory functions. "Specified anatomical areas" shall be deemed to include less than completely and opaquely covered human genitals, pubic regions, buttocks, anus or female breasts below the point immediately above the top of the areola and human male genitals in a discernible turgid state, even if completely and opaquely covered. The prohibition of this section shall continue until such time as the City has established the zones of the City or required new zones which might be appropriate to accomodate the uses above mentioned and the terms and conditions upon which said use shall be allowed in the respective zone or zones of the City.

SECTION 4. EXEMPTION.

Notwithstanding any other ordinance regulating the issuance of use permits, including this ordinance and those applicable to rezoning, the City Council may allow the issuance of a use permit for the uses set forth above, providing that it finds the following conditions exist: conditions exist:

1. The establishment and maintenance of the use applied for conform with the comprehensive planning and land use regulations being studied or will not conflict with those regulations.

2. The proposed use will not be detrimental to the standards of concentration, density and spacing of said use in the respective zones of the City, which the Planning Commission has under study or intends to study within a reasonable time.

zones of the City, which the Planning Commission has under study or intends to study within a reasonable time.

3. Adequate utilities, access roads, drainage and other necessary facilities have been or will be provided.

4. The proposed use will not, under the circumstances of the particular case, be a nuisance or be detrimental to the health, safety, peace, morals, comfort and general welfare of the persons residing in the neighborhood.

5. The proposed permit or use is not detrimental or injurious to property or improvements in the neighborhood and is appropriate to the location, the lot and the neighborhood.

The Council may impose any conditions to the granting of said permits or use which it considers necessary to avoid conflict with the proposed comprehensive planning and the land use regulations under study.

SECTION 5. URGENCY IN TAKING EFFECT. This ordinance is an urgency ordinance and is for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health and welfare. The facts constituting the urgency are those set forth in the findings above mentioned. The City recognizes that it will take substantial time for the Planning Commission and the City Council to study and consider all the facts required to be studied to make an ordinance consider all the facts required to be studied to make an ordinance regulating the zones in which the use being studied may be located and the conditions and terms upon which said use might be located in the said zones, and which will not be detrimental or injurious to the environment of said use. The Council finds that it would be destructive to the proposed regulations if, during the period that they are being studied subject to public hearing, parties seeking to establish said use might do so for the purpose of defeating in whole or in part the ultimate objective of the regulations ultimately established by the City relative to said use.

or in part the utilimate objective of the regulations utilimately established by the City relative to said use.

SECTION 6: If any section, subsection, sentence, clause or phrase of this ordinance shall for any reason be invalid, such holding or holdings shall not affect the validity of the remaining portions of this ordinance. The City Council has declared that it would have passed this ordinance and each section, subsection, sentence, clause or phrase thereof, irrespective of the fact that any one or more section, subsection, sentence, clause or phrase thereof, one or more section, subsection, sentence, clause or phrase thereof, be declared invalid. SECTION 7: This ordinance shall be signed by the Mayor, attested by the City Clerk, and published in the Upland News in pursuance to the requirements of the California Government Code.
